New Duke University Libraries Collection

Duke Libraries' new "Witness to Guantanamo" Collection contains 149 interviews with Guantanamo Bay detainees, their family members, guards, attorneys, interpreters, interrogators, advocates, journalists, and more. This new collection is the most comprehensive collection of stories on Guantanamo Bay ever assembled.

You can submit both short and long form pieces to Dignity for publication. The deadline for long-form scholarly submissions to Dignity is February 1st, and short-form content submissions are accepted on a rolling basis. Dignity is a student run undergraduate human rights journal that seeks to showcase a broad spectrum of human rights scholarship from students across the UNC system.

Dignity: An Undergraduate Human Rights Journal

- Dignity will offer this new minor. The capstone will be a resettlement and would pair especially well with the IGS concentration in Human Rights. This new program is a great chance for IGS students to gain experience with refugee CNNC's work.
